Now only two things keep her going —her love of plants, and her hatred of Serkan Bolat.

When Serkan comes to speak at the university, Eda is protesting outside. A series of unfortunate events leaves these two handcuffed together for most of the day during when Eda learns that Serkan really is everything she hates: arrogant, self-centered and a complete control freak. For his part, Serkan couldn't care less, but when the media mistakenly link the two, he hatches a plan to use Eda to get back at the ex-girlfriend who dumped him and is now engaged to another man.

The unlikely pair come to an agreement. Eda will pretend to be Serkan's fiancé, and he will reinstate her scholarship. The arrangement will only last for a couple of months until his ex's wedding, but pretending to be the fiancé of one of Istanbul's most eligible bachelors turns out to be a lot harder than Eda imagines.
